I feel that the proposed settlement in the Microsoft Anti Trust suit is letting them off too easy. MS has been found guilty of using their monopoly powers illegally by integrating the IE web browser. It still continues today. They have extended it by making the MS Update site the only place to go to get software updates and then that site REQUIRES the use of IE in order to update Windows 9x and newer. If they have other methods available, they have been working hard to keep normal users from finding it.
